Tuesday, June 18th: Arrival in Lima, Peru.

Everyone will be met at the airport and taken to Hotel Casa Andina Select.

Wednesday, June 19th: LIMA

This first morning we will visit the Museum Rafael Larco Herrera. This private museum has one of the largest collections of ceramics in the world. It is said to include over 50,000 pieces. They include a selection of gold and silver pots, feathered textiles and a Paracas weaving that contains 398 threads to the linear inch (a world record). Many tourists are lured here by the famous collection of Pre-Columbian erotic pots illustrating with the sexual practices of ancient Peruvians.

Then we will drive out of Lima for 40 minutes to a beautiful farm where breed Peruvian Paso Finos are bred. We will enjoy a demonstration of these beautiful horses and learn about their tradition in Peru. Lunch will be at the farm.

Return to Lima. This evening we will have dinner in a local restaurant.

Thursday, June 20th: LIMA - CUSCO

In the morning, we will fly to Cusco arriving around 10:30am. Our private bus will take us to our hotel - Casa Andina San Blas or Koricancha Cusco.

Lunch will be in a local restaurant.

After lunch, we will take a walking tour of the city. The city will be alive with music and colors because it will be the beginning of the Festival of Inti Raymi (the most important annual festival for the Incas celebrating the Summer Solstice). Cusco is the "hub" of this spectacular happening. Some of the highlights of Cusco are Koricancha (the Temple of Gold), Ceque Lines, the tunnels below the city, the Rainbow Temple and San Francisco Cathedral (at the center of the festivities).

Dinner will be in a typical Cusco restaurant.

Friday, June 21st: CUSCO

After breakfast we will travel a little ways out of the city to explore Sacsayhuaman (pronounced “sacksy woman”), which is in the zigzag shape of a serpent, and is said to be connected to the energy of lightning. Here we will participate in a ceremony with a Qero elder to bless our adventures and sacred journey. Sacsayhuaman, a huge Inca temple with many interesting structures, holds the key to understanding the traditions of the local people. Afterwards we will continue on to Q'enqo, an ancient ruin with caves and symbolic carvings.

In the evening, will have dinner and participate in the festivities of Inti Raymi taking place in the center of Cusco. There will be colorful costumes, parades, dancing, fireworks and amazing sights during this celebration of the Solstice.

Saturday, June 22nd: CUSCO – PISAC - OLLANTAYTAMBO

In the morning, we will leave Cusco and travel to the Temple of the Falcon in Pisac. Here we will hike (the most stunning hike we will do) in this beautiful place and stop to work with the ancestors and their ancient wisdom. We can walk through the temples to the Temple of the Sun and the Temple of the Moon. This is a place, where you can align the masculine and feminine energies within yourself, and receive the Pampamesayok Rites, also called the Daykeeper Rites. A Qero elder will lead a despacho (ceremony) in the lower temple. He will bless any sacred ceremonial items you may have found or brought with you.

We will have lunch in the late afternoon in the plaza. After our lunch, we have the opportunity to wander around Pisac Mercado (an amazing market for Peruvian handicrafts). At the end of the afternoon, we will set up in Pakaritampu Hotel in Ollantaytambo. Dinner and rest.

Sunday, June 23rd: OLLANTAYTAMBO – AGUAS CALIENTES

After breakfast, we will explore Ollantaytambo, the Temple of the Sun, Winds, and Waters, as well the village (citadel) which was built on top of the original Inca walls. In the afternoon, we continue by train to Aguas Calientes at the base of Machu Picchu, and check into our hotel – Casa Andina Machu Picchu.

Dinner in local restaurant

Monday, June 24th: MACHU PICCHU

We will rise very early to catch the bus up to the Sanctuary of Machu Picchu, the Crystal City of Light. As an option you can hike to the top of Huayna Picchu beginning at 7am (reservations required), and enjoy a sunrise ceremony honoring the light and the Inti Punku in the distance (the Gate of the Sun). Huayna Picchu is a hill within the Sanctuary, which many people opt to climb. The climb is steep along a narrow path, but there are railings and ropes along the way. It takes approximately 3-4 hours. At the top, the view is stunning. You should be in moderately good shape to make the climb. We will spend the entire morning in the ruins enjoying the spiritual essence of Machu Picchu and the intricate handiwork of the Inca people. We will gather for lunch, and then have a guided tour of the area. The bus will take us back down to Aguas Calientes in the late afternoon. Dinner in local restaurant.

Tuesday, June 25th: MACHU PICCHU – OLLANTAYTAMBO – PATACANCHA COMMUNITY

Taking the train back to Ollantaytambo we will meet our private bus, which will take us to the community of Patacancha. For a large part, life here hasn't changed much over the past century and ancient Quechua community traditions are still part of daily life. Weaving, farming and raising cattle are among the main activities we'll find.

We will arrive for Lunch time. Our host will offer to us a traditional meal with Andean products

We will be host by indigenous families in their houses and experience live in a traditional Quechua village to learn about Andean life and the weaving tradition from Awamaki artisans. Try spinning on the ancient Andean drop spindle, discover the potential of native dye plants and visit a traditional Quechua Atelier for textiles.

It will be a good opportunity to see the agriculture techniques and tools they use and how they manage their orchards. Our hosts will take us to visit the community.

Back home, dinner and overnight.

Wednesday, June 26th: Gratitude Offering and Wachuma Ceremony.

After breakfast we will do a short and easy hike to a ceremonial site with our hosts to do a Payment to Pachamama (offering to Mother Earth) as well as Tika Alpaca, that are a symbolic way of acknowledge gratitude and ask for protection for the family, the land and animals.

Wachuma Ceremony.

The natural beauty of the surroundings is impressive. For those of you that are interesting we would offer Wachuma (San Pedro Cactus potion) a plan of power to experience the teachings that come from it. Then we will return to the community to enjoy a traditional "Pachamanca" lunch. Prepared in an underground earth oven, it consists of chicken, Andean potatoes, vegetables, and fruit. This special lunch, usually reserved for birthdays and festivals, is a highlight of our visit and will provide enough food to be shared with your Quechua hosts.

After lunch we will leave the community and go to Taypikala Lodge, in the shores of the Urubamba River. Rest, dinner, overnight.

Thursday, June 27th: Taypikala Sacred Valley-Moray and Maras salt mines

Moray was possibly a center for agricultural investigation in Inca times where experiments were done on planting crops at different altitudes. The placement of the terraces produces a grading of microclimates with the center of the terraces at a higher temperature and a gradual lowering of temperatures as one climbs to the upper levels. In this way, it was possible to simulate up to 20 different types of microclimates. It is believed that Moray could have served as a model to calculate agricultural production, not only in the Valley of the Urubamba but for different parts of the area as well.

There are different theories to explain how Moray was used in Inca times. According to John Earls, each terrace in Moray reproduces the climatic conditions of different ecological zones throughout the Inca Empire. Due to its protected position each of these terraces represents approximately a thousand meters of altitude under normal working conditions. The whole complex would have twenty or more ecological zones represented in scale. Additionally the complex may also have helped Inca officials to calculate the annual production for different parts of the Tahuantinsuyo.

The town of Maras, located some 6 kilometers above the salt flats, is also worth a visit. In Maras you can see the Church of Saint Francis of Assisi, built of adobe brick, which still shelters some oil paintings by Antonio Sinchi Roqa Inka, a well-known artist from the Cusco School of painting. The lintels of many of the houses date from the Colonial Era, and you can see the shields and family crests that were carved in stone along with the name of the owner and the date when the house was built and the lintel was put in place.

The Maras salt flats are a collection of more than 3000 evaporation pools which date from before the time of the Inca Empire. A small stream of salty water emerges as a natural spring from underground and is distributed through an ingenious system of canals and channels to each pool. The whole complex of pools covers some 5000 square meters in terraces on the steep slope of the side of a mountain called "Qaqañiway".

We will return to Taypikala, a magnificent place to rest and consolidate the experience. Here, you can pamper yourself with free time. Spa service is available at the hotel.

We will complete our journey with a final circle where we can share our experiences and deepen our connections with each other and the journey we have all shared.

Friday, June 28th: URUBAMBA – CUSCO – LIMA

Our bus will take us to Cusco to fly back to Lima in the morning. We will return to the Hotel Casa Andina Miraflores Lima. Before our final dinner, there will be free time to visit the old city, do last minute shopping, and/or pack and rest.
